

30-DAY MEAL PLAN

The Fatty Liver Diet Cookbook for Type 2 Diabetes

One way of eating for both conditions: 30 days of Mediterranean-style meals from everyday supermarket ingredients, energy-controlled for steady weight loss, very low in added sugar, fiber- and protein-forward, and alcohol-free — built to help lower liver fat and keep blood sugar steady.

Before you start, talk to your doctor or diabetes nurse. This plan changes what and how much you eat, and if you take insulin, a sulfonylurea, an SGLT2 inhibitor or a GLP-1 medicine, your dose may need adjusting — eating differently on an unchanged dose is how people end up with low blood sugar. Ask about it before day 1, and keep testing as usual. Two other things worth raising at the same appointment: this plan averages about 119 g of protein a day, which is more than someone with kidney disease is usually advised to eat, and it is not designed for pregnancy or breastfeeding.

HOW THIS PLAN WORKS

30 days, 5 meals a day, nothing to calculate

Every day of this plan is built from the recipes in The Fatty Liver Diet Cookbook for Type 2 Diabetes — 5 meals a day, assembled so the daily totals do both jobs at once: steady, gradual weight loss and very little added sugar for your liver, with real carbohydrate, plenty of fiber and protein at every meal for your blood sugar. Nothing here asks you to cut carbohydrate out. Every recipe serves 2; the numbers below are one person's portion.

WHAT A DAY ON THIS PLAN DELIVERS

Nutrient	This plan, per day	Why that number
Calories	1,769 kcal/day	1,700 kcal/day target — a 500-1,000 kcal daily deficit
Total carbohydrate	190 g/day 43% of calories	Not low-carbohydrate, on purpose — keto patterns are unsafe on an SGLT2 inhibitor or insulin
Protein	119 g/day 27% of calories	1.2-1.6 g per kg bodyweight — preserves muscle in a deficit
Protein per main meal	34 g	25-30 g — below about 25 g the fullness effect is small
Fiber	40 g/day 23 g per 1,000 kcal	ADA: at least 14 g per 1,000 kcal
Added sugar	3 g/day 1% of calories	The tightest number in the book — added sugar acts on the liver beyond its calories
Saturated fat	12 g/day 6% of calories	Under 10% of calories, mostly from unsaturated sources
Sodium	1,345 mg/day	Under 2,300 mg/day — acid and herbs instead of salt

Averages across all 30 days. Individual days vary — what matters is the weekly picture.

HOW TO USE IT

- Dessert is optional. Not hungry? Skip it — never force yourself to eat on schedule. Without it a day still gives 1579 kcal, 111 g protein and 36 g fiber.
- Shop once a week. Each week opens with its own shopping list, already totalled across that week's recipes.
- Every recipe serves 2. Every number here is one portion, but the shopping lists buy the whole recipe. Cooking for two, they are already right — cooking for one, halve them or keep the second portion for a day you would rather not cook.
- Swap within a column. Do not fancy the Tuesday dinner? Trade it for any other dinner in the book — the numbers are close enough that the week still works.
- Drink more water than usual. About 40 g of fiber a day needs water to work comfortably — aim for 6-8 glasses.

BEFORE YOU START

Stock your pantry once

These 43 ingredients come up again and again across the 30 days. Buy them at the start and most evenings become a 20-minute job instead of a shopping trip. They are not repeated on the weekly shopping lists — each week ends with a short pantry check instead, so the main list stays fresh food only.

A few honest limits.

This plan is food, not treatment. It is built to help lower liver fat and keep blood sugar steady alongside the care you already have — it does not replace your medication, and no diet cures fatty liver or type 2 diabetes. Nothing here is personal medical advice.

Check with your clinician before you begin, especially about medication doses if you take insulin, a sulfonylurea, an SGLT2 inhibitor or a GLP-1 medicine. If you have kidney disease, this plan's protein level is likely higher than you have been advised to eat, and needs adjusting. It is not written for pregnancy, breastfeeding, or for anyone whose liver disease has progressed to cirrhosis. Adapt it for your own allergies.

The nutrition figures are computed per serving from the USDA FoodData Central database and rounded. Real ingredients vary, and added sugars are an estimate. Treat every number as a good guide, not a laboratory result.
